

wind turbine falls down and the naysayers (there are many) want to see energy stopped in its tracks.

As with any new industry, problems are going to arise when getting established; wind energy does need to be regulated in New York state. These liens are obviously the result of a dispute between Noble Power and the contractor over work that was completed or not completed.

Ethics are a problem on Wall Street, banking, with lawyers, the construction industry, real estate, government, antiwind groups, ect., on and on I could go. Attorney General Andrew Cuomo's task force to establish a code of ethics on wind issues in New York state is a joke. The editorial a total lack of all the facts on the Malone Telegram's. This editorial is also a joke.

The cliché "Nothing ventured, nothing gained" applies here. When it comes to jobs, extra income for dairy farmers, and economic development in general, Malone, the Malone Chamber of Commerce, and the Franklin County Legislator have the do nothing down to a science.

Tim Chase Chateaugay

Ire at wind liens a joke

To the editor:

"We told you so" the Malone Telegram quotes the antiwind groups in the editorial of March 19 (wind liens need of oversight). It is more of the same nonsense from these soothsayers, spewing their doom and gloom. One nonsense from these soothsayers, spewing their doom and gloom. One wind turbine falls down and the naysayers (there are many) want to see renewable energy stopped in its tracks.

As with any new industry, problems are going to arise when getting established; wind energy does need to be regulated in New York state. These liens are obviously the result of a dispute between Noble Power and the contractor over work that was completed or not completed.

Ethics are a problem on Wall Street, banking, with lawyers, the construction industry, real estate, government, anti-wind groups, etc., on and on I could go. Attorney General Andrew Cuomo's task force to establish a code of ethics on wind issues in New York state is a joke. This editorial represents a lack of all the facts on the Malone Telegram's part.

The cliché "nothing ventured, nothing gained" applies here. When it comes to creating jobs, extra income for dairy farmers, and economic development in general, Malone, the Malone Chamber of Commerce, and the Franklin County Legislators have the do-nothing part down to a science.

Tim Chase Chateaugay

No problem with wind liens

To the editor:

Note: Part of this letter was accidentally garbled in typing, so here's the corrected version.

"We told you so" the Malone Telegram quotes the anti-wind groups in the editorial of March 19 (wind liens prove need of oversight). It is more of the same